8. Read the text: Ergonomics and Design. Match the word with its meaning.

Ergonomics is the science of designing things for people. It helps make products comfortable, safe, and easy to use. Designers use ergonomics to create furniture, tools, and digital interfaces that fit the human body.

Good ergonomic design reduces pain and fatigue. For example, a comfortable chair supports the back and helps people sit correctly. In graphic and digital design, ergonomics helps users read text easily and use interfaces without stress.

Designers must think about posture, movement, and user needs. When a product is ergonomic, people can work better and feel more comfortable.
